AO1

Some evidence of lively interpretations from contextual sources, exploring their meaning and purpose and applying these to personal ideas. Contextual references were not always studied in sufficient depth to inform creative ideas; however, they were relevant to the enquiries.

AO2

Thoughtful consideration of the relationships between ideas, processes and possible outcomes, with suitable monitoring of progression towards achieving intentions. The selection of resources and media was often appropriate.

AO3

The submission included information collected from a variety of primary sources and this material was sometimes relayed in a lively and innovative way. Critical reflection on work and progress was often not effective enough. Recording of observations and ideas was mostly relevant to the candidate's intentions.

AO4

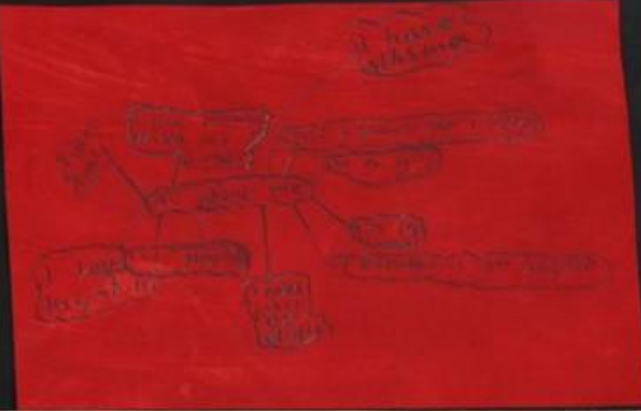

The candidate considered a range of presentational formats appropriate to the subject matter, processes and outcomes of their work, taking account of its purpose and how it might be interpreted by an audience. Connections between the various elements of the submission were relevant and the mark awarded could take more account of this.

STAINED GLASS

When I first
 these stained glass windows
 I like how the patterns have been repeated
 over and over Black outlines, I think the work is really simple cause
 it's not the
 scale of the work is significant. Stained glass artists need
 work

It's fabulous because it looks like a ~~piece~~ ^{stained glass} ~~piece~~ ^{like a} ~~piece~~ ^{Chaple}

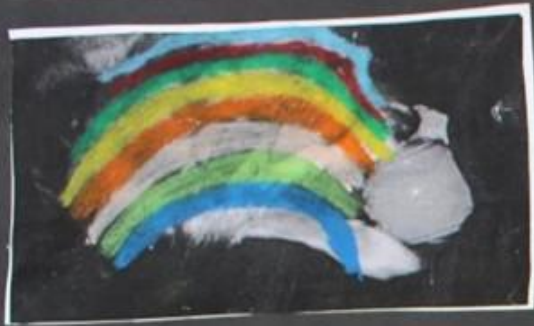

Protect

When I first saw Andy Warhol's work I thought it was cute. The work reminds me of my dog because she's cute. There work shows lots of colours. The work tells the story of colourful dogs, I think the work is really small because it's a small dog. It was made for goggle, the artist used paint so the surface texture is a bit like right. The colours that the artist used was green, red, grey, purple, yellow, pink, blue, pink, orange. The artist has made marks on the work by dog shapes. The work makes me feel happy like the work reminds me of dogs.
